when the biare of the bands was hushed and the music had ceased and the drills of the forester teams were over, the Woodmen filed slowly out of Convention hall at an early hour yesterday morning, each one feeling that the eleventh biennial convention had been a grand success. They were tired after the long hours that had been spent in hard work and were glad to take advantage of an opportunity to rest. But there were thousands who hurried away on the first trains and did not wait to rest before journeying homeward. All day long the visitors were leaving, some on every train. The headquarters at the Coates House looked chaotic; baggage of all descriptions was strewn about the floor of the lobby and the guests were rushing to and and the music had ceased and the drills lobby and the guests were rushing to and fro. Thousands left the city last night and the last few stragglers in uniforms attracted considerable attention. The downtown streets did not present a scene of strangers dressed in variegated costumes montal revelations had been aired. McGee last discussions had been aired.

more satisfactory to the order than any other that has been held.

"We needed just such a gathering," said Mr. Rodenberg, "to build up the fraternal feeling that is necessary for the achievement of success. More work of importance has been transacted at other conventions, but considering everything I think that Kansas City has done more than her duty." The local Woodmen were somewhat disappointed in the number of visitors who attended, but a conservative estimate places the number at 15,000. The Woodmen blame the railroads for the high rates that were demanded. The ball last Thursday night returned about $2,000, to Treasurer H. Harris. A much larger crowd attended than was expected.

The convention cost the order about $50,000, but it was not more expensive than former conventions. For the efficient manner in which all the details of the convention were so carefully arranged the following members of the head seem the said seems of the head seems.

Programme at Troost. With reasonably fair weather this will be a big day at Troost park, as there will be two concerts by Zimmerschied's mili-tary band. The animal cages never seem tary band. The animal cages never seem to lose their interest for those who go to Troost. For to-day's concerts Professor Zimmerschied has chosen some very popular compositions. In the afternoon will be played for the first time here an arrangement of the coster songs which have become associated with the name of Albert Chevalier, the great English coster singer. The songs have been put into form for the Chevalier, the great English coster singer. The songs have been put into form for the band by Charles Godfrey, and the arrangements is said to be an especially pleasing one. Another strong feature will be the new medley by Boettger, in which are included "Military Molly," "Why Don't You Get a Lady of Your Own?" "She Was Bred In Old Kentucky," "My Girl is a Hawaiian Maiden," and "All I Wants Is My Chickens." The overture to "Wilhelm Tell" and popular marches and selections will make up the evening programme. Friday night by being struck with a large stone thrown from the viaduct at Fourth street and Agnes avenue, is at the city hospital in a critical condition. The attending surgeons say there is no hope for his recovery.

When removed to the city hospital Friday night the injured man was not able to tell very much about the affair. The police worked on the case all day yesterday, but were unable to discover any clue that would disclose the identity of the person or persons who tossed the stone down on Mason's head. Mason was passing underneath the bridge at the time, in company with two or three workmen. About all Mason was able to say about the affair was that he thought some person mistook him and his friends for a gang of loafers who had been hanging around the bridge, and dropped the stone down on him. The police do not believe that Mason was assaulted.
